LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16, 1868. The great excitement of the day in our ity is, of course, the late action taken by the Senate and the rejustatement of Sec retary Stanton at the War Department. The national capital could hardly be more tirred by the political events which take place here than is the population of this metropolis. Wall street especially presents an interesting sight. Anxiousoking individuals are seen running to and from the telegraph offices, as if the salation of the country depended on their eing hourly posted about the occurrences and the movements of high official persons Washington. One will prophesy that we are all rushing towards general ruia, another tells you that we are already ruined, a third is clated over the success of Coagress, and a great many will shrug their shoulders and make perhaps the most appropriate remark of all by saying that we will have to wait how matters will develop themselves before any sound udgment can be formed in the impendng case. The financial world may possibly be more affected than the people generally by the news from Washington nasmuch as it will affect the price of ess irregular and unsettled.

There is not a week and hardly a day passing by without bringing to light some vholesale bank defalcation, robbery, or that these occurrences originate in the loose and careless way in which the majority of these establishments are coned to the bank, or perhaps a relative of one of the directors, has under his conrel milliuns of dollars every day, and house, and delivers himself to every exby his employers he says that he has thus he goes on speculating with others money, until he finds himself head-overnut to walk under. There are some fanny away with a few hundred thousand dolstatucs in the streets, one of which is a huge ogre, represented as in the act of biting off the head of a haby, while a number of little children are wriggling and her of little children are wriggling and the detective employed to discover the helt going round his waist, in which they was informed yesterday that his services were no longer required, and that the other young ones in a bag by his side. At bank was in hope of soon discovering his cases to coatinue the investigation and to see to such defaulters of public money heng properly punished in spite of compromises which may be made between the bank directors and the family of these swindlers. The ousiness of foreign checks is likewise en roque to quite an extent ia our city, and only yesterday a man by the name of S. T. Whatever may he said against that system, t must be acknowledged that the public will thereby be benefited, especially those persons whose husiness is not in the immediate neighborhood of the postoffice, or one of the stations.

Traveling about the city and to the ibnrbs is still made nader difficulties: he slippery streets, covered with just enough snow to make walking uncertain, t difficult to proceed with the weight of sixty or seventy persons behind them, packed like so many herrings into the cart. To go to Brooklyn or Williamsburg s a voyage to undertake, the ice is the river offering serions obstructions to the regular trips of the ferryboats. Nevertheless, all places of amusement are wel Opera House is the chief attraction of the hour, and so far the selection of operas made by the manager has been a very lucky one, and attracted a fashionable audience. Madame Ristori enrus he laurels at present in Brooklyn, where she has given a number of performances. The season for concerts has also arrived, and besides the Philharmonic Society, who hearsals for their third concert, Messrs. Mason & Thomas will give their second musical soirce at Irving Hall, and it is to be hoped that the laudable efforts of these will be duly rewarded. Those who are par tial to the attractions of the ball-room find ample opportunity at present to gratify their fastes. Thus we may, in addition to the numerous private parties of our uptown fashionables, mention among others the ball to be given by the Young Meu's photograph album, and as sooner had I unclasped its backs than a sweet opera came from it. The Judiciary Committee of the State Senate has reported a bill to establish a police force for the city of Louisville and Jefferson county. The bill is among the orders of the day, and, we understand, will be taken up for action in the course of the present week. As it is high time that our citizens knew somethirg about it, we publish it in full in the Journal of this morning. It is long, but it should be read and pondered by every

GENERAL TROUGHALE, OF TENNESSEE. -I was our happy privilege, one day last week, to have an interview with General William Trousdale, at his home in Gallatin, Tenn. He is one of the most honored fortnmate individual wrapped around the warriors and statesmen of the old Volunteer State. The people love and venerate him more than ever, if possible, since his retiracy from public life, made necessary and watched him with jealons care. Some by wounds and disease received in his country's service. For more than ten years he has been too infirm, from rhen matism and paralysis, to leave his house. During that long period, however, he has been an assiduous and interested student of political and personal history, and a close watcher of passing events: so that he is fully conversant with all the momentons changes in the character of our republic, and has been able to form the most anerring judg ment respecting those changes. SUNSET IN THE CITY.

Summer was in the sky to-day, though the mantle of winter lay on the broad bosom of half the world. As I watched the sun go down the path of day, gathering is robes of purple and gold-fringed clouds arcund him like a king, I saw the crosserowned towers with the yellow mist of vening floating letween, windows flashing with slant sunbeams, and all the glow and glory of the bridal of earth and sky! And to those who have naught of pature's beauty around them-as lofty trees, fair owers, or laughing streams-how much the sky is to them! Its every varied cloud, its tints, gray or gorgeons, its sun, noon, and stars are each a part of life's poctry, the nucleus around which cluste houghts that bring ns near to God. You nay shnt out all else of beanty from a man's life, you may chain his limbs until the 'iron enters his soul,' until the rust eats exposure of his person yesterday on away his life; but if you leave the space of one little star for contemplation enough of heaven for a thought to rest on, though he forget the world, he will lream of heaven; he may be bound, but his thoughts will scar he may have no nome, but his heart will, up there! But I was writing of the sunset over the many dark-roofed houses, of the people that hastened through the streets with such different faces, of whistling cart-men, and pale-cheeked women going from crowded work shops, and the smooth roll of satinushioned equipages, while overhead the twilight deepcued, and star-pinions fluttered from the nest of night. I could hear whispers of music on the chill air from great lighted halls, and the gavety of night had begun; the kiss of day grew cold

It is such a fashion to go in eestasies about the opera that I know I shall be regarded as beyond fashionable salvation to say it is not interesting to me to listen to orcign operas. I love to see a fine comedy well represented, a good tragedy acted as it should be, but to see people running ike lunatics over the stage singing something in Tentonic language is affectingly laughable. In the first scene of the Magi ·lute. Tamina, a man, rushes on the stage with a snake, as large as he is, after him. and he stops to sing how frightened he is. Then the Queen of Night and two stars. I suppose, fly to his rescue, and sing to him while he goes to sleep in close prox imity to the cobra; it was such a noise three made over him that l thought he was dead, but he awoke to go through fire and water. I noticed the same night that the only scene encored o repetition was where Papageno and l'apagena act, not sing much. First, one loops down, and the other runs around him or her, crying, "Papa, papa, papa," until he or she is tired, and the other follows in the same style, and the scene ends by Papageno carrying Papagena out n bis nrms. This was applauded unti the whole scene was played over, which mpressed me with the idea that our opera goers have not so great an appreciation of singing after all, as there was little or one in this scene, and two cats might have done as well in an attic frolie. But

How delightful it is to be tenderly fold. ed in warm wrappings, and have masculine fingers just touch a little soft chin as ribbons are tied (so awkwardly!); hut who would do it themselves when it admits of one upward lock to thank "somebody" for the most nucomfortable choking! How delicions it is to lean on "somebody's" arm over sude crossings and be so carefully lifted in the carriage and hear "somebody say such beautiful words, that next day we hiss the flowers we wore, because they beard them, and-but I am dreaming. Nothing of this ever happened to poor little Kitty. But it would be delightful. I do not mean foppish adulation or obsequiousness, but manly kindness and refined politeness that show a deference to every woman, be she rich o' poor, young or old. A woman's heart is more easily won by kind attentions than any thing else, and no gentleman would harm by even a touch the trusting ianocence of a pure woman she is his own honor-a good man holds sacred the honor of woman. He who takes from her soul its pearl, who stains its whiteness, is noworthy to touch a murderer's more honorable hand, or to look o the Virgin's Son in prayer! May Heaven protect the weak from the merci At a morning reception recently the bostess wore a rich black satin with plain gored skirt, immensely long, trimmed with black honiton lace, petticoat of canary-colored silk covered with lace, and corsage cut square, trimmed round the edges with lace, over a narrow border of canary silk; sleeves long and loose, lined with eanary silk and trimmed to correspond. This was very becoming to the lady who wore it, with a little black lace cap tammed with delicate gold leaves. Etruscan gold brocch and car-rings in long pendants made the tout ensemble perfect. matroply lady wore a brown velvet with train untrimmed and ornaments of camcos set with pearls, and rich Foint d'Alencon lace at the throat. A young lady was eoquettishly attired in very light green corded silk, with apper skirt of darker green looped, instead of spened in front, by cordons of light green velvet leaves that extended to the waist and formed an cxquisite trimming for the corsage; sleeves of light green tight to the arm, with longlowing ones of darker green looped like the skirt, at the middle of the arm, with light green velvet leaves laid on smooth. This beantiful costnme was relieved by coral ornaments. Outdoor and carriage costumes were many and elegant. A KENTUCKY HERO.

IE PLAYS THE ROLE OF GAY DECEIVE IN CANADA-ALMOST TRAGICAL, DI NOVEMENT.

In the Hamilton (Canada) Evening Times of the 14th inst. we find a scusaional account of the exploits in that city of a young Louisvillian, who, if his mislloings are correctly stated, had better leave his country for his country's good. We know the fast young man in question, but deem it proper to withhold his name from our readers for the present. The imes thus parrates the follies and tribuations of the wandering youth: "An ex-ecdingly animated scene was enacted ast evening in the upper stories of a fashionable hotel in the city, attended with all the incidents of a shocking scandal-the iscovery of fallen virtue, cowardly flight of the guilty paramour, and the noble rage of an injured husband in pur suit of vengcanee with a revolver at short range. Some few days since a gay and dashing chevalier arrived in the city, representing a leading tobacco honse at Louisville, Kentucky, to look after the connections of the establishment in this city, and, like a right jolly man of the world, determined to associate pleasure with business. This festive gentleman had a luxuriance of personal graces and a pleasing air that strongly recommended him to the gentle senses of the fair sex, whose companionship he coveted. During a brief sojourn in the city his eircle of ac quaintanecs spread rapidly, and charming conng ladies were not loth to forego the nventionalities of refined society suffiently to partake of his princely hospiality in the form of champagne suppers given without stint, while most of the fashionable 'dead beats' of the city became his retainers, and enjoyed the benefits of his prodigal iuvestments in choice wines, etc. This round of innocent festivities passed smoothly enough until a sinister design that lurked beneath was, last evening, discovered in the manner intimated; and the gay gentleman was compelled to suspend his season of pleasure in this locality for the present, through fear of a threatened penalty of his imprudence. esterday afternoon, the gallant blade de voted his attentions to the entertainment of a lady sojourning in the same hotel, whose husband, unhappily, was compelled to be absent during the hours devoted hy rdinary people to business, and naturally, no doubt, the young wife was afflicted with ennui from this circumstance. That his entertainment was on the scale of accustomed generosity was indicated by enormous demand on a first floor department of the establishment for a gentle heverage known as 'milk punch," the thirst of the social couple seeming to be insatiable. The tivities were finally terminated, however, by the intimation of a third party assuming to have authority in that apart ment of the hotel, which claim was readily recognized by the precipitate departure of Lothario, who left the companion of is guilt to explain to her hetrayed lord the palpable evidence, as best she might under a highly confused state of intellect. The uproar that followed was alarming, cape of the paramour, who has not since heen heard of, although the injured husband has requested a personal interview with revolvers. The scandal created much sensation among the friends of both parties, and the sudden disappearance of the distinguished visitor is much de plored. THAT "FIENDISH REBEL ("TRAGE" IN BRECKINRIDGE COUNTY .- We republished ecently from the Chicago Tribune a special dispatch from Washington, giving brief account of what was reported to le War Department as a "fieudish rebel outrage" in Breckinridge county, in this resterday from a gentleman of that coun-, givee, no doubt, a correct version of the allar:

I noticed in your paper of the Sth a piece you styled "An Improbable Story," taken from the Chiengo Tribune, there titled "A Fiendish Revel Outrage." We have a colored school, taught by a colored man named Taylor. He concluded to have an exhibition and Christmas tree on Chistmas eve; a few moments before the Christmas eve: a few moments before the exercises commenced several of the negroes began to quarrel about some point of the proceedings, the teacher failed to restore order, and came up town for police to quiet the disturbance. He was informed there was none, and advised to go back and call the mruly negroes to order, and, if he then failed, subject them to the law. He went back, held his exhibition, &c. which closed at 80 clock. About held.

He went back, held his exhibition, &c. which closed at 8 o'clock. About half-past ten s me person did blow out about three feet square of the wall and five by six of the floor. The platform was laid with loose plank, but not one was thrown from its place by the explosion. The perpetrater of the act has not been found. Some suppose that the negroes that were hrought to order had thus avenged the fancied wrong done them. The negroes here have never been illegally treated by the "rebels; there have heen no threats against them by any one. The school-house belongs to the Methodist Church, South. The 'rehels' are advising and helping the negro, and, be it said to the credit of the poor, unfortunate negroes, they are generpoor, unfortunate negroes, they are gener-ally endeavoring to make useful, honest, respectable citizens. In conclusion, I am convinced that ignorance or deprayity convinced that ignorance or depravity actuated the author of the story in question, for Breckinridge has ever heen a quiet, intelligent county—ucver attempting to harm their opponents in politics, much less the ignorant African. These are facts without prejudice.

REPORT ON TOBACCO TAX AND REGULA ons.—The special committee instructed resolution of the Board to consider the notition of the trade in unaufactured bacco, with the effect of the present review. nue tax and regulations, now suhmit their report:

The depression in this hranch of manufacture is hecoming more and more apparent every day. For some time past most of the factories have either stopped work or have been working on a limited scale. At this moment all are closed, and a general resumption is not probable before spring. The prospect is that the capacity of the factories will not be fully employed, ander present auspices, more than an average of eight months in the year. Yet here were but twenty-three factories at work in lichmond the past year, against upwards of sixty in 1860; and the decline the manufacture throughout the State as been in nbout similar proportion. The trade is also inactive and depressed throughout the country. Stocks are large and accumulating without any corres-tonding demand. The movements in the West and North in search of some relief relicate that the same unhealthy condion of things prevails there, and that this rge interest is generally laboring unde ome unnatural restraint, which prevents is full growth and development. Your committee are satisfied that the xtreme character of the internal revenue tax is the source, and the only source, of this depression, and that a reduction of this tax to a comparatively low point, wit such additional regulations as will effect lly guard against fraudnleut cvas will alone afford relief and remedy. Are excessive tax, hindering any occupation beyond all reason and proportion, inevit wenue, while it checks the industry of country by decreasing consumption cultivating fraud. This result is as ain as any other of the laws of trule; on manufactured to acco has, to a very ge extent, curtailed its use, and is now rating to prevent the extens ufacture, by more than doubling st to the consumer. The effect of such a tax in promoting and is, perhaps, more injurious than e effect upon consumption. We say thing here as to the moral question, in it when honesty can only thrive by imi ns of law and the reward they offer fo dical crror in the law itself which calls it is repeal or revision. To what extent is cyas, on reaches in connection wit manufactured tobacco cannot, from the nature of the case, he ascertained with texactness. The general opinion places it from one-third to one-half; some even sigher, and all agree that so large a part escapes the tax as seriously damages and urrounding those engaged in this many facture, your committee are of opinion that a renewed and united effort should be made to obtain a reduction of the tax and a change in the regulations by which its collection is conforced. Proposition with this view bave already been submitted by the Convention of Manufacturer at Cleveland, by the Tobacco Roard o New York, and other like bodies, with the Conformation of the Conformat which it becomes us to counsel and co-operate. While the action of these bod-ies agree in general sentiment as to the grievance and the necessity for reform, yet they are not altogether in accord as to yet they are not altogether in accord as to the measure of reduction and the detail of the provisions against fraud. Yet what difference there is appears to be founded to ther upon apprehensions of success upon an appeal to Congress, than on the merits of the question itself.

On a review of the whole subject, keep-

State. The following letter, received ng in view the used of adequate revenue, he encouragement and enlargement of he manufacture and the security against vasions, your committee favor a uniforn evasions, your committee layor a uniform tax of ten cepits per pound on all descrip-tions of chewing and smoking tobacco (other than cigars), in every case to be pre-paid by stamps purchased from the collector and canceled by the inspectors. fore the tobacco leaves the factory Pre-payment, in the mole proposed, is se only device to make sure of the col-cition of the whole tux. All others have iled, and will fail, in a greater or less but pre-payment is utterly impracticable if the rate is excessive. Even at ten conts per pound, the outlay required before sale will not be easy for the large majority to carry, though this inconvenience would be preferable to "the ills we have." Any he presentable to "the ills we have." Any advance of the rate beyond ten cents, would preclude the idea of pre-payment, and open the avenues of fraud again.

Under this actually large but comparatively light tax, the amount of revenue may not equal, the first year, what it has been; but as a permanent tax through centimous years will doubtless contribute more towards the payment of the national debt than if allowed to remain as it is. In the one case the subject itself, being rehe one case the subject itself, heing re-ieved from this incubus, will be constantly frowing and enlarging, paying increase ribute as it prospers, which may be col-ceted at wastly less cost and withou abatement by evasion. In the other, it eslizes somewhat the idea of ripping realizes somewhat the idea of ripping open the goose to obtain the egg. Meanwhile this branch of the industry of the country suffers, and the labor it might and should keep employed, suffers with it.

Other amendments of the law have been suggested—as for instance, a reduction of the tax to twenty cents per pound, with a provision that all manufactured tobacco shall go into bond before being offered for sale, but as they are only intended as substitutes in case more complete relief should fail of success, and do not go to the root of the evil, it is not important to consider them now.

Of course if any change of the character Of course if any change of the characte ndicated shall be made, the operation o he amended act must be sufficient!

F RAORD NARY SEL! DESTRUCTION OF A tone cleven o'clock, Jacob Bullach, a boy before eleven o clock Jacob Bullach, a boy only cleven years old, committed anicide by hanging himself by means of his comferter at his mother's residence, No. 411 West twenty-lifth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues. From injuries made it appears that the deceased was devotedly attached to an elder brother named Lawrence Bullach, and the latter was lately committed by Justice Dodgo to the Island as a confirmed of mkard, his mother, a widow, having requested the Judge to ad pt this plan for his reformation. Instittle ley has been plunged into the deepest despondency since his brother has despondency since his brother ha en sent to prisou, and has repeatedly seen sent to prisou, and has repeatedly mplored his mother to go to the Police Court and try and get him released again. Thinking, however, that it would be better for the young man to be kept in a place where he could not gain access to inquor, Mrs. Bullach has persistently retured to get Lawrence discharged. Yeaterday morning Jacob made a last uppeal to his mother, but she turned a deaf ear olds is entreaties and went out to market. to his attreaties and went out to market, leaving him crying bitterly. On her return home she found some difficulty in opening the door, and when she at last succeeded in doing so she discovered to her horror her little boy hanging by his comforter from one of the pegs behind the door, quite dead. Her shricks of alarm quickly brought in the neighboring lodgers, and a doctor was sent for and the body of the boy cut down. Medical assistance was of no avail, as life was quite extinct. Mrs. Bullach, who is a French woman, has endeavored to support her family homestly for some time past, having been left a widow with a large family. There is little doubt that grief for his brother's imprisonment prompted the boy to take away his life, and the circumstance has created the greatest excitement in the neighborhood. HOUSE. WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. Mr. Ross, rising to a personal explana-ion, referred to what be said yesterday n reference to one of his colleagues Farnaworth) drawing pay as a member in reference to one of his colleagues (Farnaworth) drawing per as a member of Congress and a Brigadier General at the same time, and said he had no knowledge or information of his colleague having done so. He therefore considered it proper and just to take it back.

Mr. Farnaworth thought the retraction very well as far as it went, but it did not cover the whole case. His colleague had spoken of relatives of his wearing shoulder straps or beinge i ployed in foreign missions.

Mr. Ross explained that that part of his conark was not intended to apply to Mr. Farnsworth, but to his other colleague, Mr. Washburne, who had applied it to

Mr. Farnsworth stated that he had Mr. Farnsworth stated that he had many relatives in the army who wore the garb of a soldier, but the only one he had in the army wearing shoulder straps was a gellant officer who fell at Gettyaburg. He had not rotated, as his colleague charged, from one place to another. When the war began he raised a regiment and took it into the field, and was in the service fighting the enemy when his constituents elected him to Congress. He remained in the service until March 4, 1863, when he tendered his resignation, and from that day his pay as an officer had ceased. He wished he could say that at the same time his colleague [Ross] was not a Knight of the Golden Circle, fighting the Union army in the rear.

ATLANTA, Jan. 18.

Mr. Roes declared that any such allusion to him was entirely without foundation in truth. He had never been a member of any such organization; he never had any sympathy with those who had been striving to destroy the Government by rebellion, and had none with those now trying to destroy it.

Mr. Parnaworth asked whether his collegue had not repeatedly declared on the rue bad not repeatedly declared on the mp in Illinois that the war was for Mr. Ross assured his colleague that he ad never said any such thing. He had ojec'ed, as the Democratic party had ob-cted, to the war being carried on for ab-

the highest respectability that he had now in his possession a report of a speech made by his colleague in a lodge of the Knights of the Golden Circle.

Mr. Ross repeated his denial, and that any statement that he had been in such lodge, or had anything to do with the order, was false in every respect.

The Honse went into committee on the state of the Union, Mr. Dawes in the chair, for general debate on the President's message.

dent's message.

Mr. Baker addressed the committee on the subject of the treaty who the acquisition of the Russian-American possessions. He contended that the treaty, although complete in form were the subthough complete in form, was not the su-preme law of the land until it has re-ceived the sanction of the legislative de-partment of the Government by way of making an appre-priation to carry it out. That acquisition ought to be disapproved That sequisition ought to be disapproved and the appropriation rejected. Aside from the plain power of Congress to act from its own free discretion in appropriating money to purchase new territory, was another ground on which he rested the Union, and thus Congress was made sole indee of what new elements shall enter into the political body of the republic. into the political body of the republic. He argued that the acquisition of British America and the logic of that would also lead to the acquisition of the West ilso lead to the acquisition of the re-ndies, Central America and Mexico, and hine the life of the nation might be smothered by the enormous and crude messes that would be finng permanently upon it.

He appealed to Congress to rise to the hight of the question—to the altitude of of independent and manly statesmanship—by disposing of the emblect, not in a spirit of mean subserviency to those who had no constitutional ascendancy over Congress in the matter, but in the free exercise of the great powers which the Constitution had expressly devolved on Congress.

Congress.

In Mr. Kelly's address to the committee on the industrial interests of the country, he attributed the contraction of the currency and moderate exactions of taxation to the present paralysis in trade. The Secretary of the Treasury and his adherents were responsible for this general prostration of credit and business. For himself, if he were asked whether he did not what to return to specie payment, he would answer he did not in the way of bankruptcy and repudiation. The country was not, however, returning to apcde payment. The difference between the greenback and the gold dollar was widening with every month; the country was not on the roadjo resumption, and would not be until confidence was restored and industry quickened by the repeal of the needless taxes that were giving foreken manufacturers. that were giving foreign manufacturers the advantage in American markets; nor until the Secretary of the Treasury was deprived of his power to contract the currency, and to tamper with the market value of every species of property by his secret operations in gold, and that too to the ruin of the credit of the country.

Mr. Woodward spoke on the subject of tenders, the payment of all the debt not expressly excepted, the cheapest of the two; yet contending that the legal was unconstitutional, and arguing that it ought to be repealed as the true road to expecte payment. He opposed repudlation, favored the restoration of the ten excluded States as white States, and the repeal of the cotton tax and reconstruction laws.

Mr. Blaine argued in favor of the payment of the bonds in gold and against the issue of any more legal tenders.

Mr. Hubbard, of West Virginia, argued that the 5 20 bonds should be paid in coin or its equivalent, and favored the substitution of national bank notes for legal tenders.

The fractional currency issued for the week was $560,500; amount ahlpped, $774, 736; amount redeemed and destroyed, $349,400. The national bank actes issued were $133,888; amount in circulative traces.
